

1 Shell Structure

Everything for the shell could've been coded in the main function, however due to the size of this project, it was decided to modularize everything. Processes like parsing, executing commands and checking for background processes were put into functions that allowed for more streamline code.

Within the shell, a while loop continuously asks for user input until the input equals the exit token.